Climate change is one of the biggest challenges facing the world today. The Paris Climate Agreement is a pact between countries all over the world to keep the global temperature rise below 2°C.

It is now our job to try and undo the damage that has been done to the Earth's climate system from burning fossil fuels. Your generation has the task of coming up with innovative ideas to help solve the climate problems ahead.

What is a collaborative public art project?

A collaborate public art project is an arts activity that is open for everyone to contribute and participate in. Together everyone's work adds up to one large project with lots of different perspectives.

So what can we do?!

Draw The BLUE Line is our way of showing support for the Paris Agreement. The BLUE line represents the rising sea level due to the radical climate change. Drawing the BLUE line as a community will bring awareness to the cause, sending a message of solidarity to world leaders and the rest of the international community.

On this page, draw a blue line to represent the rising sea levels. If you'd like to make a bold statement, fill in the blank below your blue line. "Flood" the area from the ground to your line with an illustration or illustrations of how you feel about climate change. It could be anything from sea creatures, to garbage, or with simple expressive lines.

Be creative! This is your project too.

Kids, ask your parents to #DrawTheBlueLine too!
